

SECTOR SKILLS ASSESSMENT

LIFELONG LEARNING
UK

Help identify the skills needs of the lifelong learning sector

As the Sector Skills Council for the lifelong learning sector we are undertaking the annual Sector Skills Assessment to identify future skills priorities for the UK and for each nation.

The findings include skills shortages and skills gaps, along with recommendations for addressing these issues.

Findings from the research contribute to understanding the sector requirements and to influencing the policies and programmes of the UK government and its four nations.

The findings also enable employers to identify their training and development needs to ensure best results for their organisations and the sector as a whole.

The easy online survey takes approximately 20 minutes to complete and gathers information from across the lifelong learning sector which provides invaluable insight about recruitment, skills of staff, training and workforce development and future skills needs.

The survey is available to employers in community and learning development, further education, work based learning, higher education, career guidance, and libraries, archives and information services.

How the findings can help you

- By knowing the skills gaps and shortages you can better prepare your organisation and workforce for the future.
- The findings enable you as an employer to plan and develop strategies to prepare for the challenges ahead.
- The findings can help you retain employees by providing them with the training and support they need – career paths etc.

Get involved

To take part in the 2010 Sector Skills Assessment go to www.lluk.org/ssa.htm

Submit your response to the 2010 Sector Skills Assessment survey by 31st August 2010 and enter a draw to win one of four £50 Amazon vouchers.

For any enquiries contact us on 020 7375 9340 or email ssa@lluk.org.